One feature of Tuesday's election caused considerable comment. The shelf of every booth entered by a voter was covered with cards telling him to vote "yes" on the bond issue. This sort of electioneering is contrary to law, and it is easy to see how it can lead to great abuses.

Four minute clerks in the Superior Court were replaced Tuesday by apof the Democratic adminis tration. James R. Collins, William Burgstedt, Charles Eldman and Wil liam J. Now that they have ruined Chicago streets by passing the city forester law which prohibits citizens from caring for their own trees and forces them to pay for a city license for trimming them, the faddlsts want to take away the street names. The Daily News wisely says:

not advisable, first, because of the historic significance of the present names: second, because the changes would add an element of confusion to street naming that does not now exist and, third, because it is unnecessary.

True. Changing street names mainly for the sake of change—that, after all, seems to be the chief motive of the ambitious name changers—would be foolish or mischievous or Get rid of confusing duplications of street names, and link short streets together by a single appropriate name wherever that is practicable, but spare this community the infliction of anybody's alleged perfect system of street nomenclature.

TURN LEON AMES INTO SPITBALL ARTIST

Pitcher Ames of New York Glants.

Probably the most important move made by McGraw since the training season began is his decision to turn Leon Ames into a spitball pitcher. If Ames can develop a good spitter to slice in between his speed and famous curve ball he ought to be a very valuable man. He is working at it daily, and Wilbert Robinson is so pleased with his progress that he wants to confine himself entirely to the spitter except for an occasional change in pace.

This new move by McGraw is interesting, in view of the fact that until Bugs Raymond joined the Giants the spitter and never permitted his Hughes.

twirlers to use it. The success of Tesreau, who was changed into a spitter overnight, did much to influence the Giant manager in training other pitchers in that direction. It has been a theory in baseball that the spitball was destructive to the pitching arm, and this was confirmed by the quick decline of Jack Chesbro, the pioneer. The fact that Ed Walsh has used nothing but the spitter for years, however, and is as strong as ever, has thrown a new light on the subject. Ames has just about passed the zenith of his career, and the acquisition of a spitter certainly could not do him "Mc" had always been opposed to any serious damage. It saved Tom

Former Semi-Pro Pitcher Gets Chance With Wisconsin Team-Has Wonderful Curve.

(By DICK M'BRIDE.) Jack Ryan, former college pitcher and for the last three years one of the star flingers of the Chicago semi-pro clubs, has affixed his signature to a 1913 contract to play with the Green Bay club in the W. I. league. Bobby

Jack Ryan.

Lynch, a former team-mate of Ryan's, manages the Green Bay club. This will be Ryan's first year in the minor

His career as a pitcher began in 1909 when he played with the St. Ignatius College club. His work that year attracted the attention of Frank McNichols, owner of the Chicago West Ends, with the result he wore a West End uniform in 1910. He played semi-pro ball until this year.

There is no reason why this young ster cannot make good in the minors as he has a good arm, speed and a wonderful curve ball. He had several chances to sign with the minor leagues in the last two years, but thought he hadn't enough experience This year he says he is ready.

Roanoke Gets King. The Roanoke Club of the Virginia no contract before February 1, has League, has signed third baseman signed with Jersey City, which is Raymond King of Washington, D. C. short of men because of holdouts.

JACK RYAN WITH GREEN BAY | "KILL THE UMPIRE!"-WHY? Prof. J. E. Boodin of Kansas Says It is Natural Result of Fusion of Several Minds.

When the crowd in the bleachers shout "Kill the umpire," it is only the natural result of a fusion of minds. cording to Prof. J. E. Boodin of the University of Kansas, who addressed the Western Philosophical association at Northwestern university. The demand for the life of the umpire is brought about by a peculiar condition," said Professor Boodin. "He makes a decision which does not appeal to some spectator. That spectator so informs his neighbor, and gradually the entire, crowd in the stand is brought to think that the umpire should not be allowed to live. The mind of a crowd generally thinks in the same channel as an individual. Under certain conditions a hundred people will think the same as a single person. In witnessing an unusual occurrence the crowd will think the same as the individual."

Busy Racing Horse. What was probably the busiest trotter-or pacer, either-of 1912, was the stallion Heartwood (2:1314), campaigned throughout Canadian and Pacific northwest. He raced no less than 23 times, winning eight times, was second five times, third four times, fourth three times, and only three times unplaced. His winnings were $4,975.

Golf Championship Sept. 17-18. Harry L. Ayer, of the executive committee of the United States Golf assoclation, has announced that the dates of the open championship this year have been changed from June 4 and 5 to Sept. 17 and 18. Assurances have been received from Edward Ray. the British open champion, and from Harry Vardon that they will enter the New York Wins Shot. New York turned the tables on Philadelphia in the annual intercity trap shooting match by winning from the Quaker City gunners by a score of 469 to 457. Can a man of William Hinchman's temperament make good as a manager of an American association base-ball club? In view of the undisputed fact that some have doubt as to his ability to make good, Hinchman's own answer may be interesting. The question was put at him squarely some time ago and he replied thus:

"I may be counted as a quiet ball player and lacking aggressiveness. I have always decided while a player to keep my mouth shut and play ball. Now that I am manager it's up to me to do the talking and running of the team and I propose to do it with just as much success as I had in minding my own business when a player. I want to succeed and to succeed one must have a winning ball team. I intend to be a ginger jar and to have control of my club in a quiet, firm way. It's up to me to make good or fail to realize my ambition of becoming a good manager."

The disposition of George Perring on the team this spring will be interesting to watch. It is the intention of the management to start Pete Johns at third base, his natural position. There is a vacancy at second base and Perring may be switched there or to the outfield. Miller has made good at first base, so there is no opening at that spot. That a place will be found for Perring is certain. He can hit too well and do too many winning stunts to leave him off the Thresher is one of the leading candidates for right field. He comes very highly recommended and will be planted in right, where Congalton used to hold forth. If Johns' attempt to make good at third fails, of course he will go back to right.

Manager Hughie Jennings favors Gulfport, Miss., as the permanent training quarters for the Detroit club. "A good pitching staff means a troublesome ball club," says Christy Mathewson, gently boosting his own the American league schedule. Beginning April 27, the Washingtons have twenty-eight straight games on the road. Joe Tinker is trying to make a deal with the Boston Nationals for Outfielder Vincent Campbell, who has announced that he will not play in Boston again. Plans of certain Kansas City people to take a franchise in John T. Powers' new Federal league fell through because no suitable grounds could be secured. Manager Birmingham says if he de cides to keep Fred Falkenberg he will not give Toledo a pitcher in exchange but will send a couple of fielders to the Mud Hens.

A Wisconsin judge has held in a ball player's suit against his club for a promised bonus that the contract was void because it provided for services on Sunday.
